

“Portraits of Alzheimer’s Caregivers” a photography exhibition

Raymond W. Holman, Jr.

supported by the Penn Memory Center and the University of Pennsylvania Health System

November 21, 2013 through February 2014

Perelman Center for Advanced Medicine, Level 2
South Pavilion

Photographer Raymond W. Holman, Jr. documents those sometimes forgotten figures in the battle against Alzheimer’s disease dementia. Young and old, men and women — caregivers are often on the frontlines of the daily undertaking to ensure dignity for those suffering from dementia.

Inspired by his own father’s death in 2001 from the disease, Raymond has photographed more than 80 people who have dedicated themselves to caring for others. 27 of these portraits are being exhibited through February 2014 at the Perelman Center for Advanced Medicine at the University of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Holman is an award-winning photographer whose photographs have been featured in the Philadelphia Inquirer and Philadelphia Daily News, and exhibited at the African American Museum in Philadelphia.

For more information contact Tigist Hailu, Coordinator for Diversity in Research at the Penn Memory Center, at 215-573-6095 or tigist.hailu@uphs.upenn.edu.

Penn Memory Center

A National Institute on Aging-designated Alzheimer’s Disease Center

www.pennadc.org